Judge Kelley's case has been cited as one where cancer was caused by the excession of the cancer was cancer was caused by the excession of the cancer was caused by the excession of the cancer was cancer was caused by the excession of the cancer was ca nive use of tobacco, but he told the writer that the cancerous affection of the cheek from which he suffered was hee to the habit he had of going to leep with a quid of tobacco tucked into his cheek and resting his head on that oide. Judge Kelley, now seventy years old, smoked and used the best fine cut immoderately for fifty years, but he has abandoned the habit.

Vice-President Colfax for many years smoked ten or fifteen very strong eigars erery day. He was suddenly attacked by a serious vertigo while Vice-Presi-dent, and he attributed it to the narcotic yet Vice-President Wilson, who never tobacco, was stricken almost pre isoly as Mr. Colfax was. The late or Carpenter frequently smoked two boxes of cigars a week.

Ex-President Arthur smokes less than formerly, lighting his cigar now seldom before dinner, but when in the ate night hours he was busied with work his companion was a cigar, some-times three or four. Dr. Hammond is eported to have once said that geneally three or four cigars after dinner ed few men of average constitution, and Mr. Arthur thought they did good. At all events, all of his isages to Congress were written under the gentle stimulus of grant Havans. Most of Mr. Arhur's Cabinet officers were good okers. Mr. Frelinghuysen did use tobacco, though the Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. Davis, liked good cigars and plenty of them. Tobacco was the only thing that ever made Secretary Chandler turn pale. It was a rank poison to him, and though he tried many years ago to overcome the evil effects, as became a good politician, yet was a great smoker. He smoked on the public streets, at his work, and wherever he could. Secretary Teller liked a cigar that would last a long time and was not very strong. Secretary Lincoln smokes a good many pretty stiff cigars every day, and Attorney-General Brewster liked one with body to it.

General Sherman is a pretty constan smoker, and he smokes, as he does everything else, with nervous haste, so that the cigar is more than half chewed up. General Sheridan likes a good black Reina after each meal, with one or two thrown in between whiles. Vice-President Hendricks likes cigar, but dearly loves the sweet Detroit fine cut, which he buys in bulk. Perhaps Senator Frye is the most persistent smoker of the senators, there be a long session in the Senate, he will leave his seat several times in the course of it and retire to the cloakroom for a smoke. In his committeeroom and other places of unrestraint he · frequently lights one cigar at the stub of another. Poker Jack Bowen, from Colorado, sinokes constantly, and when he can't smoke he has a paper of fine-cut at hand. The two w Hampshire senators, Blair and tors Dawes and Hoar. The new Senater Chace, of Rhode Island, does not smoke, but Mr. Edmunds smokes a few okers, General Hawley not dis daining a good old-fashioned chew. It is hardly possible for any one to smoke more, bigger, or er stronger cigars than the living skele-ton called Mahone does, and his colleague, Riddleberger, is an almost constant smoker. All of the southern senators, except Gorman and Joe Brown, use tobacco, and most of them use it in two ways. Jones of Florida is not particular about the flavor of his cigars. and it is a standing joke among senators when they get a poor cigar to send it to him. He smokes it as happily as though it cost a dollar. Jones of Nevada, on the other hand, will smoke none but the best, and he makes away with ten or twelve every day. Beck. side from a few strong cigars a day, likes to titillate his nostrils with a pinch of snuff now and then, but he does not do it so publicly as Senator Thurman did. Young Senator Kenna is a great smoker, and John Logan puffs fiercely at big black cigars. John Sherman okes little cigars, light colored. and has them made specially for im, Ben. Harrison likes a pipe in office, but is more often seen on the street with a cigar than without one. Senator Conger likes to smoke three cigars a day. Senator Allison would rather smoke a good cigar and bluff out a king full than to dine at the most epicurean table. David Davis was a great smoker. Senator Conkling practically gave up the habit some years ago, but he occasionally cuts a cigar in two and chews the cut ends. Dorsey has been for years a constant smeker from the time he arose till he all, but Speaker Carlisle would be frantic if he had to go long without a quid. He does not smoke. Holman chews constantly, but does not smoke. unset Cox does not use tobacco, nor es A. S. Hewitt, ner Governor Dingley; but there are very few members in the House who do not smoke or chew, very many practicing both habits. Congressman Muller, of New York, has made many friends with his superb Reinas, and ex-Congressman Morse, of Beston, was reputed to smoke the finest cigars that came to Washington.

[New York Times.] Fire and smoke pouring from the two-story brick stable at the rear of No. 102 Navy street. Brooklyn, attracted the attention of Officer John J. O'Brien, of the Fourth precinct, shortly after l o'clock yesterday morning, and, hurry-ing to the scene of the fire, he found t a small crowd had already gathered in front of the burning building. No alarm had as yet been sent out, and O'Brien had started to give one, when somebody in the crowd told him that a ion in the rear of the stable. enough for him to climb through into the huilding, which was then full of smoke. In a few minutes he stumbled over something lying on the floor, and bending over he found it to be the body of a man. O'Brien caught the inanimate form and hurried with it to the opening, through which he rapidly made his way out into the fresh air. The rescued man was John Gleason, a driver. His face and hands had been badly burned, and the smoke had almost suffocated him. The cold night air soon revived him, however,

Having accomplished his life-saving errand O'Brien sent out an alarm, and now burning brightly, he rescued three horses and then turned in and helped the firemen fight the flames.

General Dissatisfaction at Gladsto Statement in the House of Commons. A London special of the 17th says

An increasing amount of dissatisfa follows every statement made by Mr. Gladstone regarding the Anglo-Russian difficulty. His announcement in the House of Commons this evening has caused not only dissatisfaction. alarm for the safety of General Sir Peter Lumsden and the few hundred British troops under his command on Afghan soil. Mr. Glad-stone admitted that England had backed down from the demand for the withdrawal of Russian troops. He sugar-coated the admission with little verbal jugglery by saying that the demand had "lapsed," but, however it may be phrased, it is certain that the demand has been abandoned by England. This convinces the Tories that the Government intends to sacrifice the Afghans. If this conviction extends to exact copies of the originals fornished the Afghan chiefs and they become persnaded that England is a perfidious ally, General Lumsden's doom is sealed. He will be slaughtered as remorsely as Gordon was and will become another eminent sacrifice to the policy of shillyernment by Mr. Gladstone's own stateformally announced to the country on Friday that an agreement, or, as he now chooses to term it, an "arrange-ment," had been made with Russia. Last night he stated that he had on Saturday telegraphed the text of the announcement to St. Petersburg to ascertain, whether M. de Giers Gladstone's opponents, and many of his friends, say it is intolerable that a British Prime Minister should be so obsequious as to send his speech in his own Parliament to a foreign and inimi-cal Power, and humbly ask whether it the tool in the hands of the roughest deemed it worth while to answer the dispatch, and they say that the Russian thieves, horse-thieves, incendiaries, &c. statesman has, without doubt, taken W. Todd was lodged in jail here last Sun-day. He immediately telegraphed the to the house of Miss Beard and affecfact of his arrest to Dick Rodgers, tionately asked that young lady to come leader of one of the most desperate gangs of outlaws in the Southwest. His appeal was answered in person yesterday morning by Rodgers and a number of his followers. They appeared in front of the county jail, in which Todd is confined, and demanded began an attack upon the building. " CHILDLIKE AND BLAND."

The Heathen Chine's Peculiar Method of Saving His Bucon.

From Rancoon, the capital of British Burman, comes a curious story of the insurrection in the Bhamo district. During the recent siege of the fortified town of Bhamo the Chinese residents, who form a large part of the population and live largely by themselves, were reduced to famine. They sent an envoy to make terms with the Burmese commander. The latter offered the Chinese six thousand rupes and permission to loot Bhamo, on condition that they would evacuate the town and deliver up the two leaders of the place. The Chinese answered that they would accept the Burmese commander's terms accept the Burmese commander's terms if he would simply so alter them as to allow the leaders to be delivered dead, the reason given being that the men could not possibly be taken alive. To this the commander assented, and not long afterwards he received the bodies of two dead men, as he had expected. It soon transpired that the Chinese took their pay, but made no attempt to carry our their contract. They stole the corpses of two fever victims, and, after backing them up with knives, sent them to the Burnese commander, who

A special from Varnon, Wilbarger county, Texas, says: There is a terrible state of affairs existing between the officers and citizens of this county over the killing of three citizens her since the 1st of January, two of whom—W. Since that time the Rangers and other parties have been working on the case and endeavoring to find out who did the killing. After obtaining what information they could get, Captain Schmitt, o the State Ranger force, and a prominent citizen, called on Governor Ireland at Austin and informed him of what had been done. Captain Schmitt says the Governor ordered him here with his company of Rangers to enforce the law. The result was twenty-three citizens are now under arrest. Five or of the number are charged with the killing of Morrison and the remainder as being accomplices to the murder. The examining trial will be gin Monday before Judge Williams. Your correspondent cannot learn what the defendants expect to show on the trial. All of them claim not to be uneasy as to the final result. Captain Schmitt says the State expects to prove that there was a regular organization formed by the defendants for the purpose of killing certain parties.

On examination evidences of a desperate struggle were found. The dead man's head was smashed in and his clothes torn. It is supposed that Thomas murdered him and gave out the story of his being lost. Thomas has not been seen for over a week, and it is supposed he has fled. The authorities are investigating the affair.

A Mystery Solved.

A Dayton (Ohio) special says: The mystery surrounding the strange disap-pearance of William Beiersdorfor, a young and prosperous grocer of Buck-land Ohio, which occurred nearly a year ago, has finally been solved by information received that he was murdered, which fact was not discovered until several months after the murder occurred, when the remains, which were found many miles from his home, were unrecognized. The identity of the body has, however, been fully established by his clothing. Beiersdorfor was engaged in the grocery business at Buckland, and last May he left home for Wapakoneta with 8300 to make purchases. Months passed by, and no information was received as to his whereabouts. It was merely an ac-cident that his brother, John W. [New York Times.] Dr. G. W. Cushing, of No. 221 Schermerhorn street, Brooklyn, yesterday morning filed with the Board of Health a certificate of the death of Jo-seph Cohen, of No. 150 Hoyt street, in which the cause of death was said to be "cerebral inflammation, cold, and excitement, due to roller-ska-ing at Madison-Square Garden, New York." Cohen was one of the participants in the recent six-days' rollerskating race. He became ill the day after the finish, and he died last Monday at his home. On the above certificate a burial permit was granted and the body was buried yesterday afternoon. Coroner Menninger learned of the circumstances surrounding young Cohen's death after the permit had been granted. At his request it was revoked by the health authorities, but by that time the burial had already taken place.

Notwithstanding this fact the coroner intends to make a very thorough investigation of the case. He will have the body disinterred—probably to-day will make an autopsy and hold an in quest. He thinks that the inquest will indicate the evil effects of roller-skating when resorted to as in the race. Mrs. Cohen is left entirely destitute by her husband's death, and talks of suing the management of the race for damages. She says they agreed to pay her hus-band $50 if he kept up the whole week. and for that reason alone he persevered to the end, as he had not the slightest chance of winning.

A Remarkable Incident To the Editor of the Dispatch :

From the pen of the lady whose poem on General Gordon you published a week ago came the following, enclosed with one other. The incident here re lated is remarkable. The author writes "The day before Mrs. B --- died (the lady in question was the widow of a dignitary of the church, and universally respected and beloved), when she spoke for the last time after saving good-bye to them all, she lifted her hand and called H- most intently, When he wrote to them (from Malta) he told them that on that date (December 20th) he felt his mother's hand on his head and heard her call. Hence the verses; and as I believe most fully in the power one spirit has to touch another in passing out of time, I hope you will not think the idea exaggerated. My correspondent is a sincere and earnest church-woman, without fancies or leaning to "spiritualism," as this term is generally understood, and combines with the poetic element an intellect exceptionally strong and clear.

G. R. F. RICHMOND, VA., March 14, 1885. The Passing Sout.

The hills with winter snow were white, in midnight shadow lying; Under the curtain of the night. A waiting saint was dying—The silver frost of fourseore years. Had touched her soft, brown hair; Her patient eyes were done with tears, The peace of God was there!

And passing through death's valley land. Her heart was not affaid;
The red and staff of Christ's right hand
Upheld her undismayed—
Yet once her trembling lips were stirred
By whispers faint and low;
'So hard to say the farewell word,
And yet so glad to go,"

Glad to lay down this life of pain.
Its weakness, and lis sin.
Glad the eternal rest to gain.
And safely enter in?
Glad for the light at last to full.
Through shadows cold and dim.
To answer to the Saviour's call.
And fall asleep in Him? Hard to give up the love of earth.
The tender and the dear:
The loving hearts by board and hearth.
So true in service here:
The children of her young glad past.
Her strength and shield in age;
on human love! so strong at last.
With death such strife to wage.

With dying strength her voice returned She blessed them one by one.
And in her tender farewell yearned
To clasp her first-born son.
Long lengues of land and sea stretched out Between them in that hour; What matters space? Can reason doubt Of love's exhaustless power?

She called his name with sweet caress, And as the word was said.
Lifted her hand as if to press A blessing on his head.
Then closed her gentle eyes in prayer.
And passed with folded hands into the sweet calm has en where The Lord in welcome stands!

The deep-blue southern sky looked down On Malta's bluer sea: Where crimson roses, summer's crewn. Blossom unceasingly! The warm, sweet air lay soft and still Round all who vigil kept. And with strange fancies seemed to fill The heart of those who slept.

In that mysterious land which lies Waking and sleep between; Where phantom's pass before the cy Visions of things unseen. A watcher in strange quiet lay— Closed eyes and busy brain. Told that his thoughts were far away Back in his home again.

Under the erisp skies of the north.
Where stars with keen quick glow.
Hear the strong winds go nurrying for over the hills of snow.
As with strange apprehensive dread.
His longing heart was stirred;
His mother's touch fell on his head,
it is mother's voice was heard.

No soft debusive dream of sleep.
The touch too warm and real;
The voice whose memory made him w
Clear as a trumpet speal.
In ways unseen to mortal sight
Her spirit softly trode
To give her boy a last good night
Ere it went up to God!

Those subtle powers of soul and sense.
Why should we doubt their might?
Longing and love when so intense
May make us infinite?
And these the spirit may control
From earth like arrow flying;
With power to meet one kindred soul,
And comfort it in dying;
